Mozaik peljeških vina

Stari Dubrovčani kažu "Da nema vina puno bi pjesama bilo neispjevanih, djela nenapisanih, snova nedosanjanih a i ljubavi bi puno otišlo u nepovrat."

Poluotok Pelješac još od davnina krasi nasadi vinove loze, a proizvodnja jakih, crvenih i punih vina jedna je od najznačajnijih djelatnosti s dugom tradicijom. Vinske ceste, obilasci vinarija i vinograda predstavljaju snažan doživljaj tradicije, življenja i ljubavi Pelješca i Pelješčana prema grožđu i vinu.

The mosaic of Pelješac wines

Old inhabitants of Dubrovnik say "If it would not have been for the wine, many songs would go unsung, works unfinished, dreams unfulfilled and many loves would never come to pass."

The Pelješac Peninsula has been adorned since ancient times with vineyards, and the production of strong, rich and full-bodied red wines is one of the most significant activities with a long tradition. Wine roads, winery tours and vineyards represent a powerful way to experience traditions, the lifestyle of the Pelješac inhabitants and their love for their grapes and wine.

Ston, srednjovjekovni je gradić s najdužim kamenim zidinama u Europi (5,5 km), uskih tihih ulica, starih otmjenih kuća i tragova drevnih kultura razasutih uokolo. Njegova nekadašnja vrijednost kao grada soli potvrđuje se i danas u pogonima najstarije aktivne solane na svijetu koja je ostala vrijedna tradiciji i prirodnom načinu proizvodnje soli koji se nije mijenjao još od antičkih vremena. Jeste li znali da je stonska sol po svojoj čistoći na drugom mjestu na Mediteranu. Bogatstvo čistoće i prirodnosti potvrđuje Malostonski zaljev poznat po uzgoju školjaka kamenica i mušula (dagnji) još od rimskog doba, a stonska kamenica (ostrea edulis) pronijela je slavu ovoga kraja kao potvrđeni prirodni afrodizijak.

Ston tradition

Ston is a medieval little town with the longest stone wall in Europe (5,5km); with narrow, quiet streets, noble ancient houses and traces of ancient cultures scattered all around. Its former recognition as the "salt city" is confirmed still today by the existence of the oldest active salt-work plants in the world, which have remained loyal to tradition and to the natural salt production processes that have not changed since ancient times. Did you know that the salt from Ston is rated second in the Mediterranean region for its purity? Its rich and natural purity is attested to by the Mali Ston Bay which is known for its cultivation of shells: oysters and mussels since the time of the Roman Empire. In addition to this, the Ston oysters (Ostrea edulis), have made this region particularly famous because of their acknowledged natural aphrodisiac properties.
